Governments, Stocks and Bonds. NEW YORK, Sept. 18 .- The stock market New York, Sept. 18.—The stock market to duy was the most active of any day for years, not excepting the days of the Yovember panic, and there was a great ded of excitement attending trading at all times outing the day. There was a continuation of buying for long account for outside speculation, both foreign and domestic, and large lines of short contracts helped along the upward movement, while they swelled the volume of business to unusual properthe volume of business to unusual proper-

Toward noon, however, realizations slacked away under the stubborn resistance of the market to the pressure, and the shorts came into cover. The lowest figures were reached toward 2 p.m., and after then the traders had started to take the market away from the shorts who bemarket away from the shorts, who began to realize their profits, and a material reaction occurred in the last hour. Rock Island moved back 5½ per cent, and the rest of the list from ½ to ½ per cent. Some of the more sluggish share of the forenoon were even carried down below the level of opening prices. The decline lasted until the sound of the gavel, and the market closed rather heavy at the conclusion, though the great majority of the list is

Their names were Jack and Jill. They were not Mother Goose's Jack and Jill. Still there is a goose in the story-several geese, in fact. They were going down the road to school. Jack wore a long playfrock, almost as long as Jili's dress. It made him look a little like a girl. He didn't like it. But he had to wear it, because he would play in the dirt! "What if we should meet the wolf!" cried Jill.

-I'd just like to meet him. I'd punish him for what he did."

Just then they saw a goose coming up the road—then another—a whole flock! "Maybe," said Jack, "maybe, Jill, we better go around through the field."

"Why, Jack, I thought you were brave -brave enough to fight a wolf!" said Jill. "I am-but-a wolf-hasn't wings to flap you with!" stammered Jack, "I'd be afraid of a wolf if he had wings!"

Swimming in Deep Water.

At many points along the sound, in the vicinity of Port Chester, good swimmers can enjoy a plunge from the rocks into deep water and avoid the wading process. which makes Copey island and Rockaway unattractive for bathers who like to know that the sand is five fathoms beneath their feet. One would naturally suppose that greater danger exists in deep water bath-ing places than where an ordinary sized man has to walk out the eighth of a mile to submerge his shoulders; but this is not the fact, if the experience of a landlord who has kept a hotel on the Westchester shore of the sound for thirty years is to be trusted

"Bless you," said he, "we don't have a drowning accident here once in five years. You see, nobody but a fool would jump off those rocks unless he was a prime swimmer, and when the fool comes along and gets in there are always half a dozen fellows there that are as much at home swimming as walking, and he's sure to be fished out before he has time to drown. But in the surf at many places it's likely enough that there won't be one good swimmer

"But a greater danger than that of drowning lies in all sorts of sicknesses contracted by staying too long in the sea. In shallow water a man doesn't swim much, and there is nothing to tire him, so he often paddles about for more than an hour; but where he can't rest his feet on the bottom, and has to swim all the while, he is pretty sure to come out in a quarter of that time. He is fresh and warmed by his exercise in one case and in the other he is faint and blue and shivering. I tell you, the shallows take fifty lives for one the

Keeping the Rudder in Place.

To avoid the annoyance and danger of the accidentally unshipping of the rudder on small boats an English naval officer has devised safety fittings. With this arrangement the rudder can always be retained in place, notwithstanding any obstructions it may meet, and is designed to rise and fall when the boat goes around or passes over the river swells .- New York

The Dimes Piled Up. A nimble witted young man who writes for the newspapers on current topics, at so much per column, made up his mind a few weeks ago that the possession of a type-writing instrument would greatly increase his earning capacity. He talked with his wife about the matter, and she agreed with him that the purchase of a typewriter would be a good investment. But how to make the purchase was the question. The "nimble witted" had very little ready cash, and he was not in a position to command credit to any considerable extent.

Upon inquiry he found that typewriters were sold on the installment plan, ten dollars down and ten or twenty dollars a month, as might be agreed upon. He bought an instrument for $100, and agreed to pay twenty dollars per month. Then his wife and himself made a private agreement that each and every ten cent piece that came into the possession of either of them should go into a box and be applied to the payment for the typewriter. Under no circumstances was either of them to

This plan worked very well for the box, but it nearly bankrupted the nimble witted young man in the first month. Nearly every coin that he received for change was ten cent piece. He was unable to spend more than thirty or forty cents out of a dollar because of the accumulation of ten cent coins.

One evening he went to Coney Island with his wife. They had a modest little dinner there, and upon returning home they found that they had taken in just $3.60 in ten cent pieces on that trip. At the end of the first month the box was found to contain fifty three dollars in ten cent pieces.-New York Times.

An Artist in Luck. A somewhat known artist of Brooklyn was once chosen to serve on a jury in one of the courts, where the award for listening to the allegations of witnesses and the bullying of lawyers was $1 a day. After the jury had been impaneled, he met one of his associates and remarked, "I'm mighty glad to get this job, for the art business is pretty dull."—Brooklyn Eagle.

The New Crop and Its Marketing. In its annual cotton report the New York Chronicle has the following to say on the subject of the new crop:

A year ago we said in this report with reference to the cotton crop then maturing "that the largest cotton crop ever raised was in sight." Quite as positively it can be stated this year that the crop now making is sure to be smaller than that of last year. This conclusion has, indeed, been apparent from the start. Even away back in June, among the deductions in our acreage report we affirmed, after remarking upon the un certainty of the outlook: "Perhaps we may say the promise of to-day is that we shall have a 'good' crop. There is, however, a chance that we sha'l have a 'poor' crop; out there is no possibility of our having 'full' crop."

Now, however, as the 1891 product is reaching maturity, and as we have in hand, in reply to inquiries sent out, detailed re-ports of the present situation from all parts ports of the present situation from all parts of the South, a closer approximation to probable results is possible. Summarizing the growth since our acreage report was issued, we would say that in the Atlantic states and in a large portion of Alabama and Mississippi and in the Memphis district in all of which the crop had a very late start, the plant is late still, and over the most of those sections it is fully as becaward as it was in the earlier months. It is also clear that in the whole of the sec-It is also clear that in the whole of the sec tion mentioned (although of Tennessee and Arkansas it is true to a less extent than of the other states) rains have been excessive more especially during the last six weeks and at some points caterpillars are reported to have done considerable harm. We can not think that in any of the states named the yield this year will equal the yield of the perfect year of 1890. In Texas and in Louisiana the reports encouraged the belief of a full crop until very recently. Now, however, Texas reports that the drouth which prevailed during August over a con-siderable part of the most productive cot-ten-producing portion of the state, and had not been broken at latest dates, has done very material harm. What the exact out-come of all this will be, it is of course too early to determine; but taking the perfect nditions of a year ago to make compariso with, we see no way to avoid the conclusion that a material deduction from last year's yield will have to be made in estimates.

Moiasses—New Orleans fairly active and firm; Ricchim and in good demand.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 18.—Early cables were bullish, and were accompanied with buying orders, and as a result shorts got scarce and tried to cover, but fluding no wheat for sale they began to bid for it, putting prices up sharply. Finally, after they had put the price high enough to give early purchasers handsome profits, New York began selling and rounded up a good day's business with prices at about where they left off last night, and in good shape for another bull campaign to morrow morning. Wheat ruled strong almost from the scart, and sold up 14c and held the advance with a good deal of stubbornness. There was no sensational news, but there was hardly any wheat for sale and every attempt to cover the line pur prices up instantly.

Corn one ned lower on account of the continued nne wenther, but the strength displayed by wheat caused the market to assume a strong tone. October opened at size touched 5t 3c, all table, against 6t 3g, yesterday. September was weak, losing Isa.

Hog products ruled strong and higher on good demand and the firmness in grain during the foremon, but weakened with them in the afternoon.
